A vital natural gas producer also producing fatter cows and sheep?

Ingenuity moooves. Williams is one of the largest and safest producers of coal-bed natural gas in the Powder River Basin. We're also proud to partner with neighbors like Tom Davis, a Wyoming rancher. Tom uses water from our well sites to raise healthier heifers and sizable sheep, because they don't have to travel as far for a cool drink. In fact, he says during recent drought conditions we helped save the herd. At Williams, we will continue to maintain the country's natural splendor, while beefing up America's self-reliance.

Smart energy development starts with creative thinking.

Ingenious minds. Talented engineers like Bola Folorunsho bring an innovative approach to natural gas development. Her ideas help Williams gather and process natural gas in the Gulf of Mexico more efficiently, safely and reliably than ever before. You'll find this same commitment to being responsible in all of our operations. In fact, federal and state agencies recently recognized Williams with four awards for environmental best practices. At Williams, we believe smart energy development begins with another valuable resource – smart people.

Meet the pipeline employee who leads our company in assists.

Ingenuity scores. A decade ago, Williams pipeline designer Keith Perry opened the non-profit BallCats Basketball Academy to assist Houston area youth. Williams doubled Keith's initial fund-raising total, paying for equipment and travel. Now these promising young athletes showcase their skills, earn scholarships and learn positive principles to become workplace winners. It's how Williams works. Whether producing the natural gas our nation needs, or instilling the energy to lead our country.

The path to conservation takes the right kind of energy.

Natural ingenuity. Meet Joyce Copleman. As president of the Lawrence Township Conservation Foundation, she works hard to preserve the natural beauty of New Jersey's open spaces. At Williams, we want to do our part, too. We built and tend this tranquil trail near where our pipeline transports clean natural gas below ground, out of sight. For Joyce, this peaceful path is a great way to connect with Mother Nature. And, it's just one way Williams helps keep land productive and beautiful for all to enjoy.

Ingenuity takes energy.™ Williams

Winter

WHEN IT COMES TO WASTING ENERGY, THE COLD WINTER MONTHS CAN BE THE MOST COSTLY, AS POOR INSULATION CAN CONTRIBUTE UP TO A 30% LOSS OF HEAT. SO WHAT CAN YOU DO TO AVOID WASTE?

- 1 Turn your thermostat down to 68° or lower. Each degree above 68 can increase your home heating bill by as much as 3%.
- 2 Open blinds and curtains during the day to allow sunlight to naturally heat your home.
- 3 Change furnace filters often to greatly improve the efficiency of your unit.
- 4 Seal cracks with caulk and install outlet seals.
- 5 Install a programmable thermostat to automatically lower the temperature at night or when you're not at home.

Install weather stripping to eliminate spaces between a door and frame. A tiny 1/16" space is equivalent to leaving a window open three inches.

Summer

WHEN MOST PEOPLE THINK ABOUT CONSERVING ENERGY, THEY INSTANTLY THINK OF WINTER. BUT THERE ARE ALSO MANY THINGS YOU CAN DO DURING THE SUMMER MONTHS TO SAVE MONEY ON YOUR UTILITY BILLS.

- 1 Set the air conditioner at 78° or higher. For every degree you raise your thermostat, you can save up to 3% on your cooling costs.
- 2 Keep blinds, curtains and windows closed during the day.
- 3 Clean or replace your air conditioner filter regularly.
- 4 Plant trees to shade your home. Newly planted trees will begin shading windows in their first year and will reach your roof in five to ten years.

Use ceiling fans. They provide a breeze that can make you feel at least 5° cooler, allowing you to turn up your air conditioner.

10 TEN YEARS AGO, ONLY 22 PERCENT OF OKLAHOMANS HAD A POSITIVE IMAGE OF THE OIL AND NATURAL GAS INDUSTRY. TODAY, THEIR VIEWPOINT LOOKS AS REMARKABLY DIFFERENT AS THE 6,500 SITES WE'VE RESTORED TO THEIR NATURAL BEAUTY, ALL ACROSS OUR STATE. BECAUSE NOW, 80 PERCENT OF OKLAHOMANS SEE OUR INDUSTRY IN A POSITIVE LIGHT. WHAT OPENED THEIR EYES?

{ THE VISION. THE COMMITMENT. THE SUPPORT. }

AND THE VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTIONS OF OKLAHOMA'S OIL AND NATURAL GAS PRODUCERS AND ROYALTY OWNERS. THEY'RE THE REASON THE INDUSTRY HAS BEEN ABLE TO MAKE SUCH A DIFFERENCE—FOR OUR LAND, OUR CHILDREN, OUR STATE.

< public awareness

A Positive Image Among 80% of Oklahomans.

OUR 6,000TH RESTORATION wasn't our only impressive milestone last year. A 2005 independent research study showed 80 percent of Oklahomans now have a positive image of the oil and natural gas industry—up from only 22 percent 10 years ago. And 74 percent believe our industry contributes a lot to the communities where we operate.

This past year also marked our first step in educating the public that our industry plays a major role in helping make our country less dependent on others. We called it our Freedom Campaign, and developed TV, print and online components to showcase our message.

What's more, the Oklahoma History Center held its grand opening, and naturally, the OERB was a major sponsor of the oil and natural gas-related exhibits. And we helped underwrite the Glenn Pool Centennial Project—a book and documentary on Oklahoma's first world-class oilfield. Plus, the new OERB.com was launched and saw an immediate increase in numbers, with almost 400,000 page views in the first three months, up from 46,000 during that same timeframe in 2004.

Winning the fight against cancer, every day.®

Jeana Churchill,
Pancreatic Neuroendocrine Patient

Jeana Churchill
Michelle

A Definitive Difference: Support, Positive Environment and Hope

When Jeana Churchill was diagnosed with a rare pancreatic neuroendocrine tumor in 2011, it was clear at once that her journey would be a family affair. Together with her husband, Billy, this mom of four from Las Vegas, Nevada, was determined to fight, fueled by the love of her family.

From the time of Jeana's diagnosis, her family pulled together to get the information and support she needed. "My parents, my husband and I all started investigating what this diagnosis meant," Jeana says. "We went on a mad search, looking for a surgeon who had performed the kind of specialized surgery I needed." Jeana decided to undergo surgery close to home to remain near her children, but when she was told after her surgery that the next step would be to wait six months to see if the cancer had spread, Jeana wasn't ready to sit back and wait. With the preliminary results showing that 13 of 21 lymph nodes already displayed evidence of cancer, Jeana knew she wanted another treatment option. "I said, 'What do you mean wait?' It just did not feel right."

Later that same day Jeana got a return call from Cancer Treatment Centers of America (CTCA). Jeana and Billy had contacted CTCA's early on in their search after Billy's mother had seen a commercial on TV. They were impressed with the responsiveness and compassion of the staff with whom they had interacted. When she got the call, Jeana was more than ready to explore another option. "I said, 'You could not have called at a better time,'" she says, remembering her conversation. A couple of days later on Mother's Day, Jeana headed to CTCA in Goodover, Arizona.

Informed and Empowered

Jeana was initially hesitant to make the trip. She was worried that she would be encountering yet another traditional, sterile hospital setting. Jeana was surprised by the difference she felt immediately upon arriving at CTCA. "When we walked in, it didn't feel like a hospital. There was such a comfort level—people didn't treat me like I was sick. Generally when you tell people you have pancreatic cancer, people look at you like you're already dead. Nobody did that. Each and every staff person there was smiling, happy, and engaged—and they all remembered my name." The positivity she encountered changed her outlook, she says. "It's so encouraging. It feels very close-knit, very warm. It makes a difference."

It was during her initial appointments with her care team at CTCA that Jeana truly began to understand her diagnosis for the first time. "When I sat down with my doctor, I said, 'I just found out that I have pancreatic cancer, but I don't know what that means.'" In response, she was offered a detailed explanation of her diagnosis—a stark change from her previous experience with doctors. "Now, I understood what was fighting," Jeana says. "I don't think you can really fight something that you don't understand."

In addition to gaining a clear understanding of her diagnosis, Jeana was also presented with in-depth information about treatment options. "The options were fully explained," she says, "and I was able to participate in the process of deciding which way we wanted to go." There was no doubt in Jeana's mind that she wanted to take an aggressive approach, and she felt fully supported in that decision. "I feel like if I had said I wanted to go with a more conservative approach that would have been respected too," she says. "But I said, 'I wanted to hit it hard and be aggressive, and that's what we did.'"

A Family Affair

Having decided on a treatment plan that included radiation therapy and oral chemotherapy, Jeana and Billy prepared to move the family to Arizona for the summer so that Jeana would benefit from their support. "We said the kids this was our summer vacation," Jeana says, laughing as she describes the way the family all moved into a hotel and made the best of the situation.

"The fact that the kids were welcome there and felt comfortable made a real difference."

Jeana Churchill

"The kids were really troopers—they did as well—and my doctor sat down with them and explained my treatment, which was really helpful." With an understanding of what their mom was going through, Jeana says, the kids were able to feel comfortable with their "new normal" and participate in the process. "The fact that the kids were welcome there and felt comfortable made a real difference. They really got to be an integral part of that whole portion of my journey," Jeana says. "And now they really can appreciate what CTCA offers."

As Jeana underwent treatment and the kids adjusted to life in Arizona, Billy held the family together, providing care for Jeana and managing family life. "Normally, I am the centerstone of the family and head everything off," Jeana says. "But Billy said, 'Your only job right now is staying alive. I will handle the kids and the house and anything else heading to your only priority.' It was a lot to take on, and Jeana is grateful that CTCA was able to provide Billy with invaluable caregiver support throughout her treatment. "He was offered support like you wouldn't believe."

Billy visited with a mind-body therapist which "gave him the opportunity to sit down and say, 'You know, this is hard.'" Being able to express those emotions helped him process his feelings as a caregiver and gain perspective on the family's journey. He also benefited from massage therapy and acupuncture, which relieved stress and addressed his overall wellness, allowing Billy to maintain the energy he needed to care for Jeana and their kids.

Kasie Coleman is in the Business of Bringing a Little Something Sweet into People's Days

At Sugarbelle, the bakery she owns in Baton Rouge, Louisiana, this 36-year-old mom of two young sons specializes in creating delectable pretzels, French cakes, cupcakes, and tea cakes. Kasie spent months developing more than 80 varieties of cakes, all based on what was originally her grandmother's apple jelly pop-cake recipe.

Kasie loves that her work provides a sense of connection with her family, and that she is able to honor her grandmother, who first taught her to bake. "When I started thinking about opening the bakery and made my first apple jelly pop-cake, I gave it to my mom and the first bite took her back—it was like tasting nostalgia," Kasie says. "and the more I baked, the more I felt connected to my grandmother; I just felt like she was with me."

Though Kasie has always loved to bake, time in the kitchen became an especially therapeutic release in the last year for this survivor of peritoneal mesothelioma, a rare cancer that occurs in the thin cell walls which surround the abdominal cavity. She underwent several years of intense treatment after a long search for an accurate diagnosis.

A Search for Answers

Kasie's journey began in October 2008, when she started experiencing pain in her abdomen. Her primary care physician initially told her she had likely bruised a rib and prescribed anti-inflammatory medication, which seemed to help initially. Over the next two years, though, Kasie's symptoms of pain and bloating would return repeatedly with increasing intensity, and she would be doubly diagnosed with first cholecystitis and then ovarian cancer. She finally received an accurate diagnosis of peritoneal mesothelioma following surgery to repair an umbilical hernia in July 2010.

Kasie remembers receiving the news, and the shock of this new diagnosis. "The surgeon tells me I have peritoneal mesothelioma

—he had sent it to three labs to confirm the diagnosis." At this point, Kasie says, "It's kind of going in one ear and out the other. I'm thinking, you've got to be kidding me—I'm 36, my kids are 2 and 7."

Finding the Right Kind of Care

After struggling to find a doctor who could treat her rare cancer, Kasie finally found a cancer treatment center in another state that offered treatment for her unique disease. In August 2010, she underwent Hyperthermic Intraperitoneal Chemotherapy (HIPEC), a surgery during which a heated, sterilized chemotherapy solution is delivered directly to the abdomen during a surgical procedure, and then returned to Baton Rouge for follow-up chemotherapy treatments. But CT scans in February 2011 revealed more tumors; her chemotherapy protocol was changed, but another scan in August 2011 showed additional tumor growth. She then underwent a second HIPEC, which had little, if any impact, in fact, her tumors had doubled in size. "They said there was nothing more they could do for me," Kasie says, "and they suggested I search online to see if there were any clinical trials I could try."

It was at this moment that Kasie reached her lowest point. "I was in bed, depressed and distraught," she says, "when the commercial for Cancer Treatment Centers of America (CTCA) came on." She had seen the commercial before, but she had assumed her cancer type was too rare to be treated at CTCA. Desperate, Kasie went online and asked one simple question through the Live Help function on the CTCA website: "Do you treat peritoneal mesothelioma?" Almost immediately, she got a response: "Yes."

Two days later, Kasie was on a plane to CTCA in Tulsa. "It took me by surprise how quickly it all happened," she says. "I was a little skeptical, but I figured it was worth a try." Her skepticism didn't last long once she reached Tulsa. After being greeted by a town car at the airport, she arrived at the hospital and saw immediately that it was not like the other cancer treatment centers she had visited. "I walked in, and at this point, I was impressed. It was totally different. It looked like a hotel; there was no hospital feel." The extensive, compassionate care she received in her initial consultations with CTCA clinical staff confirmed her sense that she had made the right choice. "I had tests over the next four days," Kasie says. "That made me feel at ease. I thought, something's going to happen."

And she was right. Kasie met with Samuel Beiligh, MD, FACS, who told her that he would order some of her old tumor tissue and do tumor testing, which none of her previous doctors had offered. Dr. Beiligh, MD, assured Kasie that he would present her results to the tumor board to ensure her rare case was fully examined. "That had never happened before," she says. "I was just blown away."

Healing for the Body and the Spirit

Alongside the clinical expertise she was provided, Kasie noticed other, critical differences at CTCA. The first was a sense of hope, something that Kasie had been missing. "The optimism alone was enough for me. My doctor gave me hope," she says. The other was a sense of spiritual connection that surprised her, and ultimately offered her invaluable comfort. "Everyone I spoke with was really spiritual. During one of my first appointments, my nurse asked to pray with me, which threw me off. No medical professional had ever offered to pray with me, and she really prayed with me, which shocked me." Kasie also learned about the blessing ceremony that had been part of the hospital's construction, wherein stakeholders and patients had inscribed scriptures and inspiring quotes on the building's foundation. "I just had a spiritual sense that it was in a totally different place," she says.

A week after Kasie returned home from her initial visit to CTCA, she received a call from Dr. Beiligh, during which he explained that the tumor board had advised another, different chemotherapy protocol to shrink the tumors first, which would be followed by third HIPEC. In March 2011, Kasie began a three-month chemotherapy regimen, traveling from Baton Rouge to Tulsa for each treatment. "People at home asked me why I didn't just do the chemo at home, and my response was, 'I could, but what you don't understand is that the mindset at CTCA is so different. I don't want to mess with that. I got excited going there—which sounds strange—but I really did." Throughout her treatment, Kasie continued to benefit from the optimism and hope she felt so strongly at CTCA, as well as from the integrative care model, which offered her critical physical and spiritual support throughout her treatment. She worked closely with a naturopathic practitioner and a dietitian, who helped her make gradual changes to improve her diet. Kasie also received help from the rehabilitation department to get relief from back pain and abdominal cramping. In addition, Kasie says, "Miss Phyllis in the dining room made me personal meals; I went to bible study; I met with the chaplains. It was a regular at home. I got faith, my name, I liked it."

At the end of her chemotherapy treatment in June 2012, Kasie returned to CTCA to learn if her tumors had shrunk enough to make her eligible to receive a third HIPEC. Ready to buckle down and endure another HIPEC treatment, she says, she felt prepared to tackle these next steps. "I prayed before my appointment," she says, "and I was feeling good. I expected that the tumors had shrunk and that I would then plan another HIPEC." Instead, the nurse had different news. Kasie was not a candidate for HIPEC; because instead of shrinking the tumors, the chemotherapy she had undergone at CTCA had eradicated the cancer. No tumors were evident in her CT scans. Kasie was shocked. "I said, 'excuse me? You checked the liver? The small intestine? The pelvis?' It was all clear. I was speechless."

The Blessing of Recovery

Now, back at home in Baton Rouge and fully immersed in her life—haling up a storm, driving pickup, being her life—the still marvels at the blessing of her recovery. "Now, there's no evidence of cancer. And it's because CTCA was willing to try." When she returns to CTCA to follow-up care, she continues to appreciate all of the qualities that set her treatment there apart. "For me, it's just the overall vibe of the place. It's not your sterile medical environment. I'm grateful from the driver to the front desk to the dining hall and medical staff. Everyone is willing to explain everything to me—to spend time. I love going there; it's like going home."

a step toward Healthier Communities

Everyone in the Tulsa area deserves quality healthcare – but not everyone currently receives it.

A growing number of our residents can't afford or access vital primary, diagnostic and specialty care – care they need to remain healthy and productive. It's a problem that impacts not only families and neighborhoods but the entire future of our communities.

Health+ is a growing effort by concerned Tulsa area organizations and individuals to meet the community's healthcare needs now and for the future. To make Good Health a reality for everyone.

the Solution

So how do we fix Tulsa's "healthcare safety net" to ensure everyone receives quality medical care?

The Lewin Group, a national healthcare consulting firm, conducted a comprehensive study of Tulsa's healthcare delivery system. The group then developed a strategic plan for improving how medical care is delivered to people in the Tulsa area who can't afford healthcare.

While the study offered several recommendations, the top priority was the establishment of two full-service HealthPlexes in Tulsa to improve area residents' access to quality medical care.

proposed HealthPlexes

What is a HealthPlex – and why is it special?

A HealthPlex is a comprehensive healthcare facility that offers a wide variety of specialty outpatient services to the community. For Tulsans the term takes on added meaning, as two proposed facilities could soon become the cornerstone of an improved healthcare delivery system for people who can't afford quality medical services.

To meet the community's many unmet healthcare needs, OU-Tulsa and OSU-Tulsa are stepping forward to each build and operate a HealthPlex in the Tulsa area.

Cutting Cherokee funds:
stranding the most needy.

“We’re raising a five-year old next to raw sewage. He asks why he can’t play outside. What will Congress tell him?”

We have real bad sewer problems. It keeps stopping up and sewage backs up into the back yard. I’ve had to have it pumped three times. Right now the only thing I’ve got hooked up to the septic tank is the toilet. I’ve got the shower, the kitchen and the washing machine draining in the yard because it fills up the septic system too quickly. I had to dig a trench around the sewer and to the back of the yard, so it would have somewhere to run off. It gets real soggy in the backyard and smells just terrible, but we’re getting a new system from the Cherokee Nation. If people think the Cherokee Nation can do without funding, they’re wrong. There is a need in the Cherokee Nation. I see it everywhere. If I had a chance to tell Congress myself, I would.

Mike Kingfisher
Mike Kingfisher

We’re raising a little boy named Chaaz and we can’t let him get out after dark because the standing sewage has so many mosquitoes around it. It’s just not safe. The sewer runoff goes across our entire back yard. He doesn’t understand why he can’t play outside. It has caused health problems and the smell makes it hard for him to breathe. It’s been hard on my husband too. He’s 66 years old, diabetic and has had heart bypass surgery, but has to get out there in the hot sun and fix it himself all the time. I’m also diabetic so it makes it hard for me to get out. A lot of people truly depend on the Cherokee Nation. If Congress doesn’t believe that, I would invite them to come here and see for themselves.

Chaaz Potter, hopeful five-year old.

Cutting Cherokee funds:
hurting Cherokees of all races.

“Congress says I don’t exist. Do they want to cut my family tree off at its roots?”

My name is Heather Williams and I am a citizen of the Cherokee Nation. Some of my ancestors were freedmen. Some were Cherokee. It’s because I have a Cherokee ancestor that I am a Cherokee citizen. I am just one of thousands of Cherokee citizens who have both Cherokee and African-American ancestry. A few members of Congress are trying to cut federal funding for the Cherokee Nation, because they just don’t understand what I know to be true: The Cherokee Nation is one of the most diverse, welcoming societies on the face of the earth. I want people to understand that the issue is not about whether or not we allow citizens who are descendants of slaves because we do. I am living proof. The question is whether or not the Cherokee Nation should allow non-Indians to be citizens of our Indian tribe.

I believe it is important that Cherokee citizens have Indian ancestry. My family is proud of its African-American and Native American ancestry. Both contribute to the richness of our identity.

Heather Williams
Heather Williams

I’ve also grown up within the larger American society where race and discrimination are major factors and knowing that my ancestors had to overcome the same obstacles has made me a stronger person. Most importantly, though, the Cherokee Nation welcomes all Cherokees equally, and no Cherokee is rejected because of the color of his or her skin. We are all members of the same family, united by our shared Indian ancestry. We need to continue building on that shared history, so that our children and grandchildren will keep their heritage alive and be proud.

Heather Williams, proud Cherokee citizen.

Cutting Cherokee funds:
keeping our brightest from reaching their full potential.

“My son’s future leads to West Point. How could Congress leave him with no direction?”

When we moved to Oklahoma we looked for the best school for our son. Teachers and others told us that Sequoyah was the one. Not only does the school have high academic standards, it also protects Native American culture and that’s very important to us. At my high school I was made fun of for being Indian. I don’t want that for my children, and I know that would never happen at Sequoyah.

They’re pursuing military academies and has been pre-selected to attend West Point. We’re also looking at the Air Force Academy. They were the only students in Oklahoma invited to both the Air Force Academy and West Point’s summer leader programs. We attribute his success directly to the educators at Sequoyah High School and the Cherokee Nation, which has made educating young Native Americans a priority. Here our son was taught to take pride in his heritage and has excelled because of that. There is no better place in the country for an Indian student to gain an education.

We are not wealthy. But what our son has earned at Sequoyah is more valuable than wealth. He has the potential to do anything and a bright future with no limits. The Cherokee Nation is making sure that other kids have that same chance. Sequoyah High School sets these kids up for excellence and gives Indian students their best opportunity to succeed. I want all my kids to have a chance to finish their education at Sequoyah. I want them to appreciate our Native American culture and give them the education to protect it. Without education, your land, your identity, everything can be taken. That’s what good education for an Indian student if they have no appreciation for their culture!

FINANCIAL STRENGTH

ONEOK improved its balance sheet and strengthened its financial position in 2006. Our cash flow and cash and cash-equivalents position, combined with our investment-grade rating and strong credit line, place us in an enviable financial position of choice and control regarding future opportunities.

Financial highlights include:

- Free cash flow in 2006 was $305 million, compared with $61 million in 2005. As ONEOK Partners grows its incremental earnings, ONEOK's free
- cash flow grows due to its large unit ownership position and its incentive distribution rights as the sole general partner. At year-end 2006, we had approximately $1 billion in cash and cash equivalents, including natural gas in storage, with no short-term debt.
- To help explain how growth at ONEOK Partners can benefit ONEOK, consider this: A $1 million increase in the partnership's earnings before interest, taxes, depreciation and amortization (EBITDA) results in increased income of $664,000 on a pre-tax basis to ONEOK, assuming all of the incremental cash flow is distributed. This is because of the combination of both the incentive distributions we receive as the general partner and our large ownership position.
- Our debt-to-capitalization at year-end was 48 percent on a stand-alone basis, a significant improvement over the previous year.
- To ensure that ONEOK's dividend is at an appropriate level and attractive, we increased it 14 percent during the year. In January 2007, we increased it an additional 6.25 percent. Since the beginning of 2003, the dividend has increased 119 percent.
- In August we repurchased 7.5 million shares of outstanding common stock under an accelerated repurchase agreement with a third party. This created immediate value for shareholders. We have repurchased 15 million shares in the past two years.
- We completed the final step needed to simplify our capital structure by converting 16.1 million equity units into approximately 19.5 million shares of ONEOK common stock.
- ONEOK has achieved consecutive profitable earnings each year since 1933, during the Great Depression.

Moving forward, we are empowered with attractive financial choices. These include but are not limited to: funding growth projects at ONEOK Partners; making strategic acquisitions; implementing another stock repurchase program; increasing our dividend; or paying down long-term debt.

GROWTH AND ACCOMPLISHMENTS

In addition to the successful completion last spring of the largest transaction in our company's history, we achieved many other accomplishments. Also, a massive internal growth program got under way at the partnership.

Selected highlights include:

- By design, heavy growth emphasis is being placed at ONEOK Partners, where tax advantages afforded to master limited partnerships reduce the cost of capital; and where an array of opportunities is unlocking the largest series of construction projects in the partnership's operating history. Some $143 million was expended for capital growth in 2006. In 2007 and 2008, a total of approximately $1 billion is already designated for growth across all segments. At year-end 2006, more than 25 active projects had been announced, were under negotiation or were being evaluated.
- Energy Services began providing natural gas supply and management services to subsidiaries of FirstEnergy. Under the three-year contract, Energy Services is the exclusive natural gas commodity and services provider to three major gas-fired generation plants in Ohio and Michigan. As a part of the agreement, we can utilize their unused transportation and storage capacity, opening growth potential in eastern Ohio, Pennsylvania and New Jersey. Also, Energy Services signed a 20-year, fixed-price purchase contract with Power Holdings of Illinois for 45,000 MMBtu per day of synthetic natural gas from a coal gasification plant expected to be on line in 2011. Energy Services continues to be recognized as a top-tier natural gas marketer. A national survey of 750 natural gas buyers in 2006 resulted in Energy Services being named the nation's top major marketer. It was the second time this business has been selected for the top honor.
- Our distribution business is benefiting from a companywide rate base task force, which is defining and deploying best practices to ensure that rate-case filings are timely and appropriate. On January 1, 2007, Kansas Gas Service implemented new rates, approved last fall, which are expected to increase this utility's annual operating income by $45 million. Also, rate increases were approved in 2006 in several of Texas Gas Service's 17 jurisdictions, which are expected to increase annual revenue by approximately $5 million in 2007.

You're invited. Come check us out at the Tulsa Women's Living Expo Feb 7-9.

Some people see fitness as a solitary, personal endeavor. We see it more like a crank-up-the-music-meet-a-new-friend - stretch - kick - punch - dance - sweat-your-ass-off party. And you're invited. Come see us at the Tulsa Women's Living Expo Feb 7-9.

Feel good about U.

We've built our fitness philosophy around the idea of community. Which is why we offer unique and exciting exercise classes in a supportive environment. We're one another's cheerleaders. Ask how at the Tulsa Women's Living Expo Feb 7-9.

SEAHORSE LOUNGE
CAESARS PALACE
LAS VEGAS, NEVADA

Simply Bubbly. Champaign and Australian Pot Belly Seahorses set the tone for the identity of this tranquil, ultra hip lounge.

Smoking Hot. When the elite meet at the most luxurious casino in the world, expecting the finest cigar isn't the problem. Delivering a believable brand is.

VIALÉ
CAESARS PALACE
LAS VEGAS, NEVADA

Italian Flair. The Soho arts district of New York City was the owners inspiration for the identity of this Italian restaurant.

Thank you.
